P&Z Rules Law Fair, Greenhouses Must Go

BY PAM TROBOY

Reluctant yet firm, Planning and Zoning Commissioners Thursday night decided that nothing can be done for the owners of two greenhouses "red-tagged" because of their location.

Ken Jennings, one of the horticulturists affected by the ruling, attended the worksession, but he was unable to convince the commission to overturn an ordinance restricting accessory buildings in side yards.

Under the existing ordinance, a greenhouse or any other outbuilding cannot be within three feet of the property line if it is within 15 feet of the main structure.

Chief Building Official Ralph Shick said that without this separation, there would be no protection at the property line in the event of fire.

"If everybody did this," he noted, "we could have another Chicago fire. The fourteen feet of separation gives the fire department time to contain the fire on the particular structure."

He added that he could only recommend allowing such a building along the fence if a firewall were constructed too. He said the current three-foot setback on the side yard is equivalent to a one-hour firewall.

Planning Consultant Marvin Springer agreed with Shick and pointed out that the restrictions also insure adequate light, space and access between properties. He said he knows of no other city in the area that allows accessory buildings against a fence in the side yard.

Springer did say, however, that he would not object to an accessory building on the rear property line if separated by at least 10 feet from the main building. The rear location presents no problems in fire protection, light, air or access, the consultant stressed.

Reminding each other that although greenhouses may present no problems in side yards, the same cannot be said for all accessory buildings, Richard Thompson, Bob McCurley and Dick Hickman said they believe the existing ordinance is adequate.

Hickman noted that the Board of Adjustment has granted variances in other cases of encroachment on side yards and added that there ought to be some way of handling the greenhouse cases.

The ordinance is "fair and equitable to all," he said. "I can not favor changing the ordinance, but I certainly sympathize with the problem." "This is a good ordinance until you see the two particular cases concerned," James Sides dissented. "There is no hazard, no eyesore—nothing that the ordinance says will happen has happened."

The commission's recommendation that the ordinance remain unchanged will be forwarded to the City Council later this month.

Commissioners also debated the advisability of creating a new zoning classification for teaching swimming lessons in back yards.

Shick advocated keeping all businesses out of residential districts unless they fall in the home occupation classification.

"It draws traffic," he stressed. "If you allow one, you have to allow them all. We have to act on complaints everyday. If you sanction any business in a residential area, you open the doors to a lot of problems."

He suggested that swimming lessons given by civic or other non-profit organizations are a different case from profitable businesses run from homes.

After noting that one special use permit has already been issued as a daycamp, commissioners agreed to continue the practice. Any permit will be checked periodically, however, to insure that all conditions are being met.

The staff is also to give the commission a checklist to insure that every provision is made for the protection of neighboring residents.

The commission also agreed to study the mix of apartment units in Plano. Parking requirements for apartment complexes were reviewed and commissioners may act on those at the July 18 meeting.

Not attending were Jim Rice and Lionel Berry.

Pan Am Passengers Get Boost on Ground

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Although Pan American airlines agrees persons can get from Atlanta or Dallas-Fort Worth to London on a Delta airlines jet as well as they can on a Pan Am jet, they say once the passengers are on the ground they will have been better off flying Pan Am.

Pan Am Thursday asked the Civil Aeronautics Board for authority to fly the Atlanta-London route, and reaffirm a Dallas-Fort Worth route, arguing the new U.S.-British aviation agreement would cause problems for travelers if they flew on other airlines.

The CAB already has given Delta the Atlanta route, but under the new agreement the flights would have to dead end at a secondary London airport.

The agreement approved an Atlanta-London route, but said U.S. carriers using it would have to land at Gatwick Airport outside London rather than Heathrow, London's main airport.

"Whatever 'plus' Delta may once have had from the standpoint of the ability to provide maximum public service ... has now been vitally eroded by the new U.S.-U.K. agreement," Pan Am told the CAB.

"Gatwick is not Heathrow. It is an airport some 27 miles south of London which has far, far fewer international flights than does Heathrow. Delta could thus provide service for the people of Atlanta only to this far more isolated airport."

Using the same arguments, Pan Am officials also asked the board to reaffirm its decision letting Pan Am fly from Texas to London, a route which Braniff also wants.

In asking reaffirmation of its Texas-London route award, Pan Am said it will be able to serve Heathrow from Dallas-Fort Worth, while any other carrier would have to use Gatwick. Pan Am also said its Dallas-Fort Worth flights would go on to Frankfurt, while other U.S. carriers would have to terminate at Gatwick.

Mow Job

Members of the Plano Jaycees face a big job tomorrow at 8 a.m. when the organization will hold a clean-up day at the old city cemetery located on Ave. H behind Douglass School. The cemetery, which contains the graves of many Plano settlers dating to the middle 1800's, has become overgrown with weeds and scattered with debris. Several local businesses have donated equipment to help with the clean-up, and project chairman Jerry Fuller (pictured) has asked that other clubs and civic organizations in Plano join the Jaycees Saturday morning. (Staff photo by Mike Newman).

Foods Force Prices Down, Largest Slump in Four Years

By LEONARD CURRY

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lower prices on green coffee, vegetables and other foods forced wholesale prices down 0.6 per cent last month, the biggest decline in almost four years, the Labor Department said today.

The department also said prices in the important category of consumer-ready goods were down 0.2 per cent in June, an indication the drop will be showing up soon in retail stores.

Farm and food prices accounted for virtually all of the first decline in the Wholesale Price Index in 10 months. The WPI is a sensitive inflation barometer which measures prices charged for sales in large quantities by producers.

Food prices fell 6.3 per cent from May for the largest onemonth decline since June, 1974, the Labor Department said.

The overall dip of 0.6 per cent was the biggest since the WPI fell 1.6 per cent in September, 1973.

The June decline followed a 0.4 per cent per cent increase in May. It provided the first solid evidence to back the administration's claim that rampant inflation in early 1977 was due largely to the economic disruptions caused by extreme cold weather in the East, South and North and severe drought in the West.

The WPI stood at 194.5 in June from the 1967 base of 100. That means major producers averaged large quantity sales of $1,945 in June that would have brought only $1,000 10 years ago.

During the three months ending in June, the department said wholesale prices rose at an annual rate of 4 per cent compared with 10.2 per cent in the first quarter.

"Prices moved down in June for every major category of farm products except fluid milk," the department said.

"Prices fell more than in May for fresh and dried vegetables, grains, tea and oilseeds. Fresh fruits and cattle turned down sharply ... Prices for green coffee, plant and animal fibers, eggs and live poultry also declined."

Although roasted coffee prices increased, the drop in green coffee indicated consumers may be in for a break from spiralling costs for the popular morning drink.

Prices on pork, cereal and bakery products went up last month. Home construction materials, cars furniture and a number of other products also went up—but not enough to offset the food drop.

Cops Raid Residence, Arrest 3

A raid on a westside residence Thursday night netted a substantial amount of allegedly stolen property.

A police department spokesman said some jewelry and several firearms believed to be stolen were recovered. An inventory is still going on to determine the extent of the loot.

A 37-year-old man, a 31-year-old woman and a 46-year-old man were arrested for possession of stolen property. The 37-year-old will also be charged with unlawful carrying of weapon.

Officers entered the residence at about 9 p.m. with a search warrant. A small amount of marijuana was also found at the home.

In other activity, officers investigated two residential burglaries, three motor vehicle burglaries, two bicycle thefts and a construction materials theft.

Three persons were arrested including a 13-year-old for shoplifting, an 18-year-old on Hurst and Plano Police Depts. warrants and a 30-year-old on Garland Police Dept. warrants.

The department answered 59 calls for assistance.

Landreth Kirkpatrick Jr. of 1512 Cliffbrook sustained serious injuries Wednesday night when he was stuck by a car.

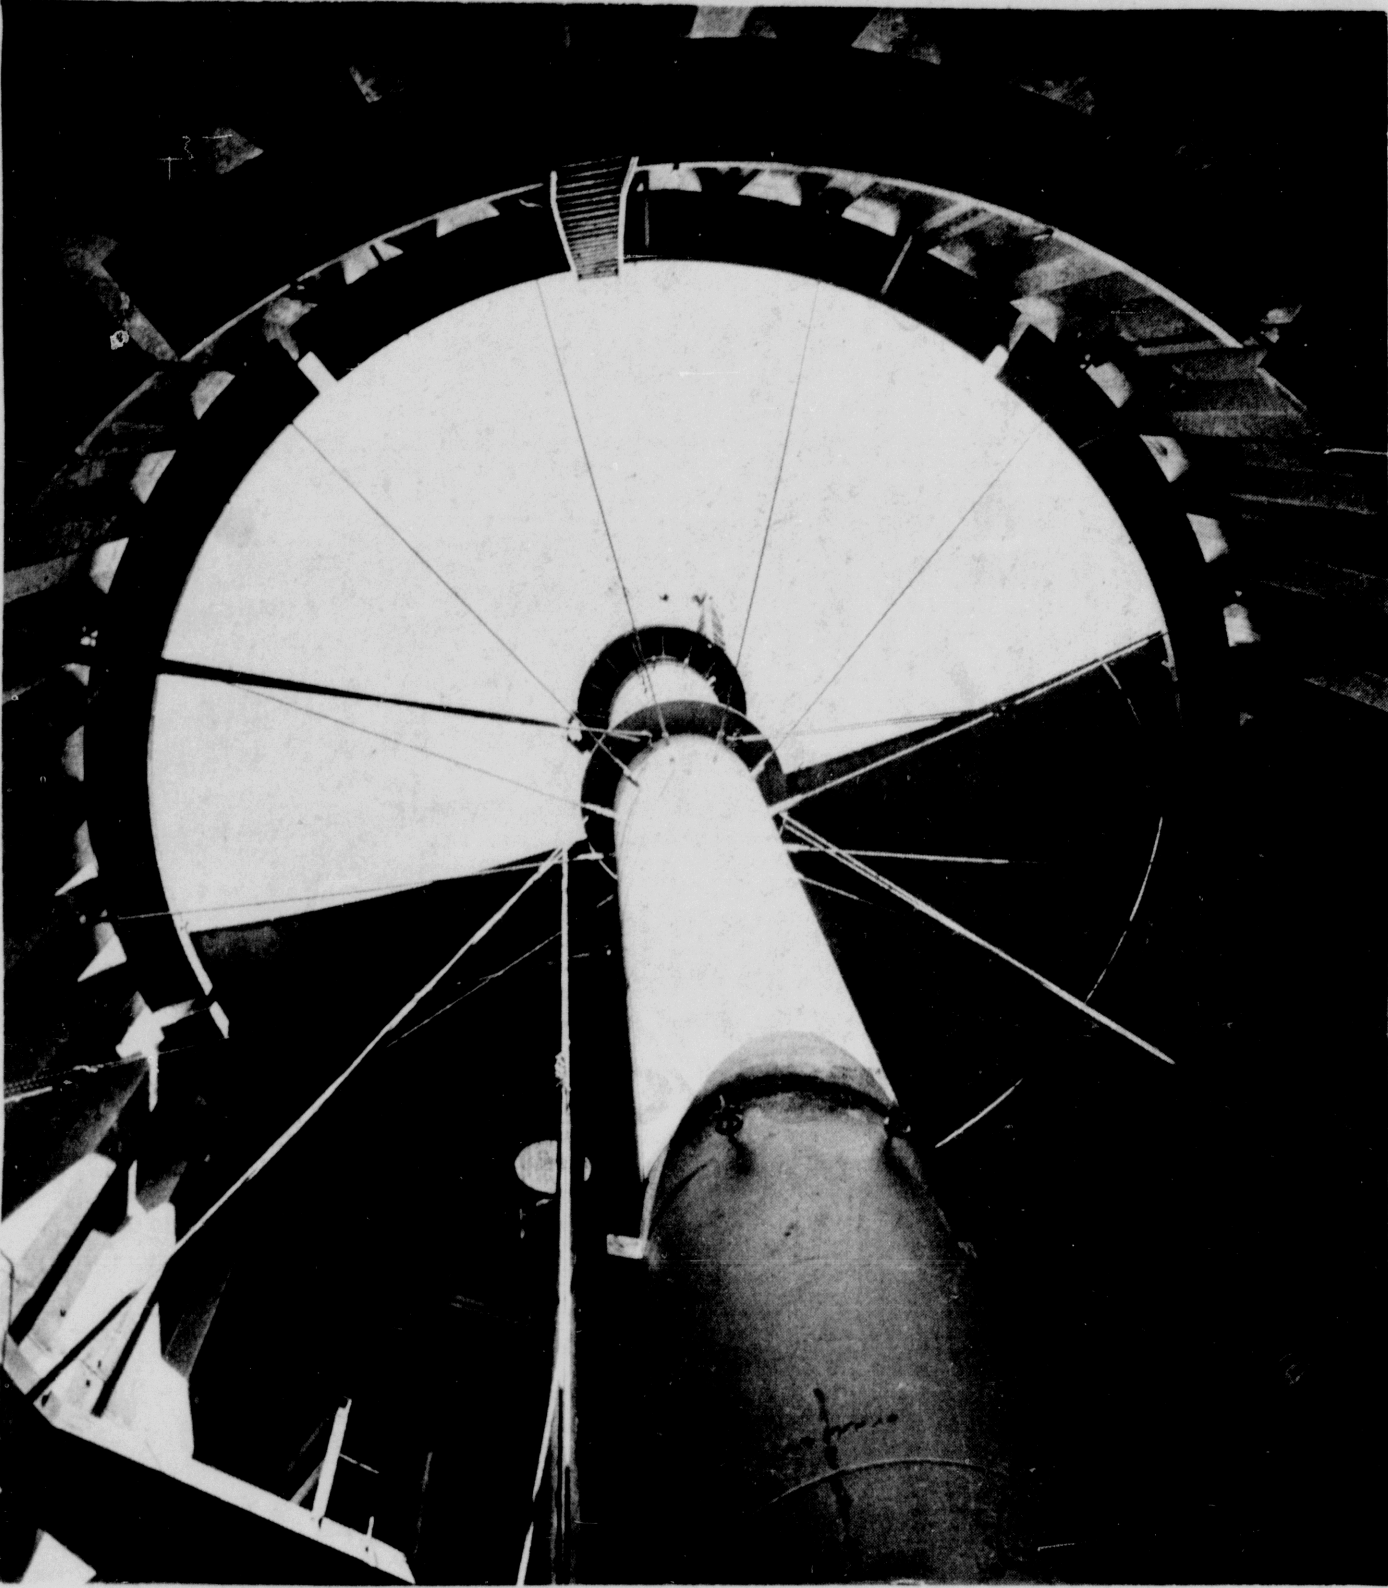

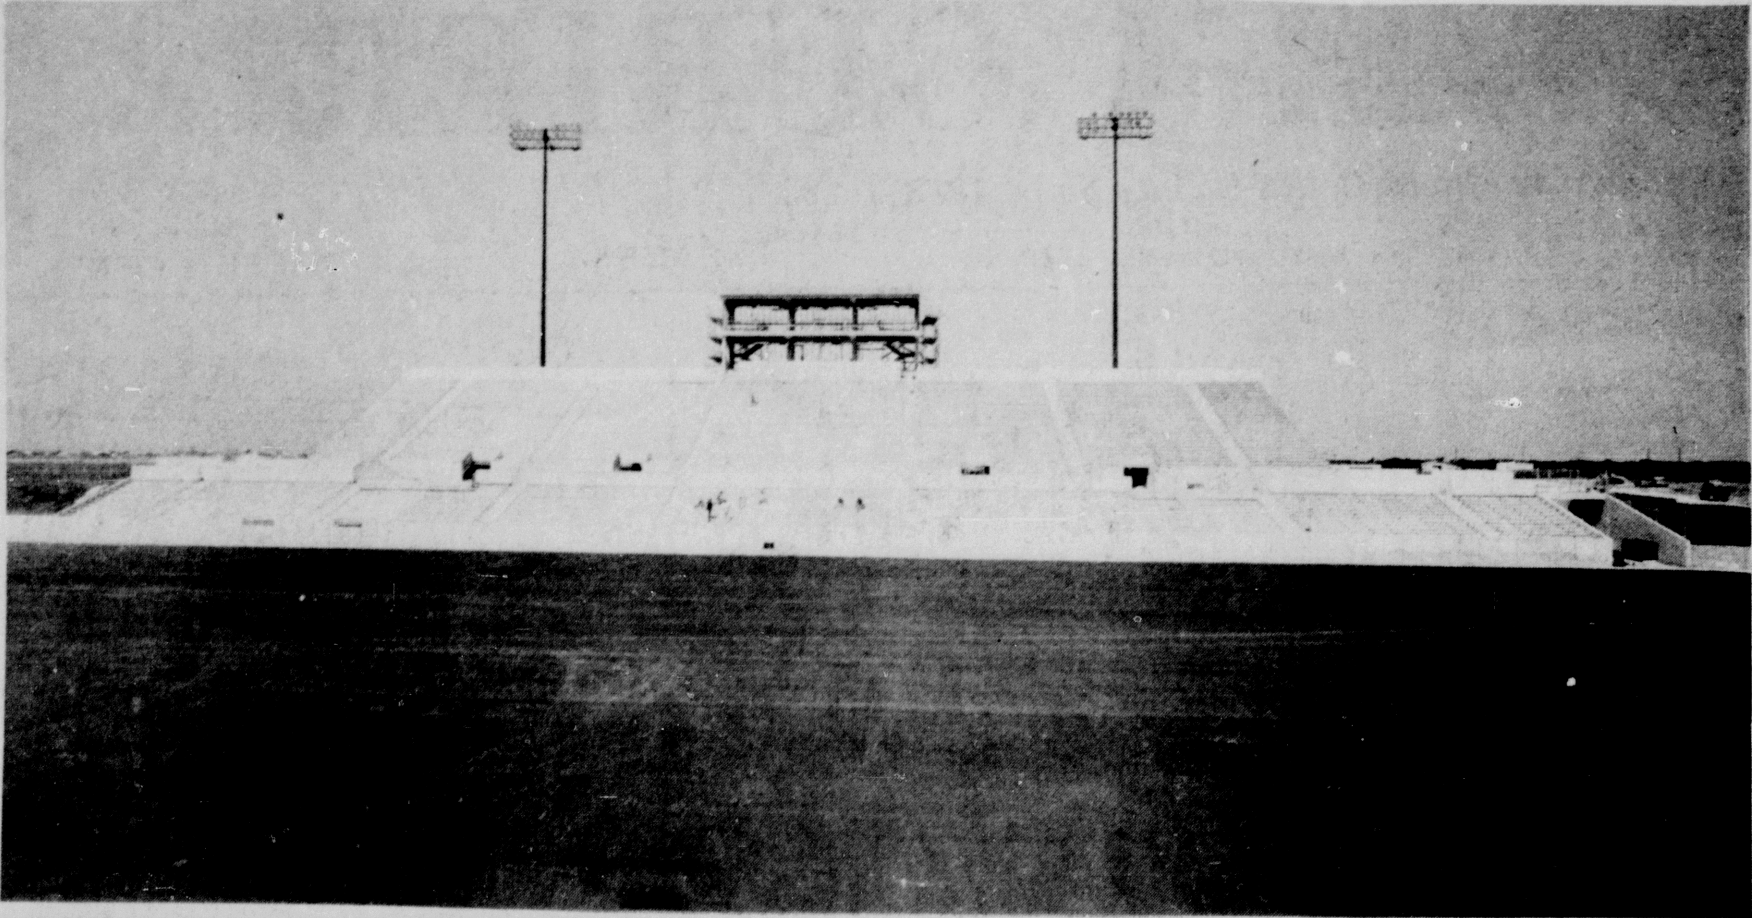

A police department spokesman said the accident occurred at 8:45 p.m. in the alley between Westbrook and Cliffbrook. The vehicle involved was a 1974 Ford driven by Bob Ellis Moses of 921 Westbrook.

The 1,800-seat Amphitheatre in Galveston Island State Park is the largest, the newest, and the most elaborate outdoor theatre complex in the United States. In 1973 the Lone Star Historical Drama Association was formed to bring life to a dream conceived more than 30 years ago when Mrs. Mary Moody Northern saw Paul Green's outdoor drama "The Lost Colony." Today, the result of meticulous care and planning, a magnificent Amphitheatre has been built on Galveston Island. The theatre stage, including the earthen berm that frames the rear area, is 150 feet wide and nearly 150 feet deep; the entire acting area is sizably larger than most amphitheatres so "THE LONE STAR" can be more spectacularly displayed. Each evening the beautiful Galveston sunset, magnificent Galveston Bay, and the wildlife area of Galveston Island State Park can be seen from the promenade deck behind the top row of spectator seats. The sophisticated lighting and sound equipment of this theatre cannot be found in any other outdoor playhouse. The almost 300 lighting instruments are housed in twin towers on either side of the stage. Both lighting and sound are monitored from a control booth on the rear upper level of the Amphitheatre.

A special cry room has been provided at the top rear of the Amphitheatre next to the control booth for mothers of small children who become restless, and parents are encouraged to use the room in order not to disturb other patrons of the theatre. On either side of the Amphitheatre are two sheltered areas known as the Wildlife Interpretive Pavilions, where Gulf Coast environmental and wildlife displays are planned for the future.

Culture Festival Set

What started as a boyhood pastime in 1911 has given John Henry 'Bones' Nobles a nickname and a lifelong hobby. Nobles plays bones—the rib bones of cows to be exact.

He will be among 5,000 Texans from throughout the state participating in the Texas Folklife Festival, August 4-7, in San Antonio. The Festival, produced by The Institute of Texan Cultures, showcases the traditional crafts, food and entertainment of 30 ethnic groups that settled the state.

Nobles has lived in Texas since 1916 when his preacher father moved the family from Georgia. He was nine years old when he began "to make those bones live again."

"It was a fad," Nobles said. "Just like yo-yos for later generations and skateboards today. Back then, parents couldn't afford to buy toys, so we just made do with what we had."

Calvin Smith, director of Lamar University's Spindletop Museum, saw Nobles playing bones for a group of children during a visit to Gladys City, the reconstructed boomtown near Beaumont, in 1975. He introduced Nobles to O.T. Baker, former Texas Folklife Festival manager. "Baker talked me into coming to last year's festival and it was great," Nobles recalled. "The one thing that sticks in my mind is the quietness, the peacefulness. Everything was beautiful, everybody getting to know each other."

"I can play behind anybody," Nobles said. But he especially likes music with a strong beat, such as blues and calypso.

Nobles' solo performances at the Texas Folklife Festival are scheduled for 6:30 p.m. on Thursday and Friday, 7:00 p.m. on Saturday and 1:30 Sunday afternoon. But you may find him keeping time with country bands, folk singers, mariachis or just sitting under a tree, making music and conversation with anyone who will listen.

The Festival will be held on the 13 acres surrounding The Institute of Texan Cultures on Hemisfair Plaza in downtown San Antonio. Tickets are $3.00 for adults and $1.00 for children under 13. Special admission books may be purchased in advance from the Institute which consist of four adult tickets for $10.00 and four children's tickets for $3.00.

Benefit Concert Slated

Entertainment will be provided by Annie Golightly, the Light Crust Dough Boys, Smokey Montgomery and John Strong. The Legion Auxiliary will serve refreshments.

All donations will go to the Larry Collins family.

Completion Nears

The Plano high school stadium is well on its way to meeting a late August deadline for completion. Asphalt has been laid in preparation for putting down the artificial playing surface (above). At left workmen install aluminum seating. (Staff photos by Mike Newman).

Preserving Food Program July 14

"Preserving Pickles, Jellies and Jams," will be the theme of a special program scheduled for the Texas A&M University Research & Extension Center on July 14, according to Judy Edwards, extension district agent.

Included on the program will be an indepth discussion on the recommended methods on home preserving pickles, jellies and jams and guests will have an opportunity to see the finished products.

Beginning at 7:30 p.m. and ending at 9:30 p.m., the food preservation program will be held in the new auditorium. Mrs. Edwards pointed out that preserving demonstrations will be given by Betty Duncan, Denton County Extension agent and Jo Curtis, Dallas County Extension agent. Doris Westermeier, Senior Consumer Information Specialist, Lone Star Gas Company, will assist.

Kissing Bug Causes Itch

The "kissing bug" is not a disease you get for your sweetheart. It is an insect whose bite can cause oozing sores or itching.

At least 15 species of this fairly common blood-sucking insect live in the Southern United States, usually near houses, barns or nests where they can get blood.

An article in the July issue of Texas Medicine, the Texas Medical Association monthly journal, says the kissing bug's bite often is painless but later it can cause blisters, itching, swelling, or red lumps, or bumps that ooze blood or other fluids. The oozing blisters often occur several days after a bite.

Another delayed reaction may be the "lower leg syndrome." Sometimes gravity influences the poison and it drifts to an area of the body a little lower than the original bite site. If this drift occurs, it can cause a sore that may take a couple of months to heal finally.

Allergic reactions can be more severe and infection often can make the bite worse. Any serious reaction to a bite needs medical attention.

Kissing bugs can hide easily in clothing, crevices or debris. They usually live near a source of blood such as an inhabited house, barn or nest. They range from dark brown to black and may have a checkerboard pattern along the trailing edges of their bodies.

Wheel bugs and assassin bugs look somewhat different from kissing bugs but these related insects will use their long snouts to bite if people disturb or handle them. Their bites are painful and can cause red spots and hard lumps. Allergies to wheel bug bites can cause more serious reactions.

LawnS and Gardens

ASK DOC GARD'NER by NEIL SPERRY

Dear Doc: I saw zinnias and marigolds flowering in a local park last October. Mine never last that long. What can I do?

I'd imagine you were looking at plants that were started about this time of year, probably to fill in gaps left by petunias or pansies. Zinnias and marigolds sown now will avoid many hot weather pest problems. They'll also show more intense colors come cooler weather.

Dear Doc: I have to move a 12 ft. ash tree from where it's been for 4 years to begin new construction. Can it be moved now?

Transplanting can be done at any time—but the chances of the tree living are very small. If at all possible, wait until cooler weather. Otherwise, try ahead, but prune back liberally to speed up recovery.

Dear Doc: We used nicotine sulfate for years on insects. I saw some a few days ago—is it still recommended?

Yes, indeed. Nicotine sulfate is biodegradable and it's safe to the applicator. It does a good job on lace bugs, aphids, and other common pests. General purpose insecticides such as sevin, malathion, and diazinon have largely replaced nicotine sulfate, but it still finds a home in many "organic" gardens.

Dear Doc: Part of the peaches on one side of our tree have shriveled and the leaves are turning yellow. What might be wrong?

Several things, chief among them peach tree borers. Check the trunk near the ground line for spots and signs of deterioration. Clean the wounds and saturate the trunk to run-off with an ethylene dichloride spray. Other possibilities include weed killer damage on the affected side, a gas leak, and poor drainage.

Dear Doc: It seems like every insect and disease you identify needs a different chemical. Aren't there any general purpose sprays of any value?

Yes, indeed. Mixed insecticides sold under most of the common brands will control the majority of garden pests. Diazinon, malathion, and sevin are also fairly general insecticides. Few fungicide mixes exist, so it's usually best to have a concrete identification and use the proper chemical.

Dear Doc: I've heard phosphorus dissolves slowly in our soil. Just how slowly?

A matter of years, that's how slowly. Apply fertilizers containing phosphorus (middle number of the analysis) today and your plants will still be benefiting next year. Phosphorus moves through clay soils at a rate of one half inch per year.

Dear Doc: What's the average life span of a mimosa tree?

Averages are tricky, but I'd estimate between 10 and 15 years. Some mimosas succumb after only a few years; others may struggle to 20. They're attractive while they're growing, but their short life span has cut sharply into their popularity.

At A&M University Greenhouse Program Set

Greenhouse vegetable growers throughout Texas will want to make plans to attend a top-notch educational program at Texas A&M University July 17-19.

The 14th Annual Texas Greenhouse Vegetable Conference will provide growers with the latest in production techniques and ideas and will also offer special information on energy conservation as well as help growers to apply for a private pesticide applicator's license.

According to Dr. John E.

Larsen, horticulturist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the first day of the conference will be devoted to registration, with the program officially getting under way on July 18 at 8:30 a.m. at the Ramada Inn.

The first day's program will follow a short course format and will deal with such topics as financing, environmental controls, pollination, nutrient solution, soil, sand, gravel, haydite and vertical tube culture, rice hulls and other organic media, nutrient flow technique, intercropping tomatoes with flowers and foliage, pest control, sales and marketing, cucumbers, plant production, transplanting and harvesting.

A membership meeting of the Texas Greenhouse Growers Council will follow the short course.

A banquet that evening will be highlighted by a talk on "Fantastic Horticulture" by Dr. J.C. Raulston, professor of horticulture at North Carolina State University. Use of some of the ideas that will be presented in this discussion could have far-reaching effects in boosting the financial situation of many greenhouse operations, contends Larsen.

The Tuesday, July 19, program dwells on energy facts and proposals toward energy self-sufficiency. Topics of discussion will include solar collectors and storage, combination solar and wood for heating, geothermal water for heating, coal-lignite mine air for heating, wind generators and turbine towers, wind power for direct drive of fans, water turbines, energy independence, wind-water generated electricity, windmill water lift, thermal lining of the greenhouse at night, and energy loan programs.

As fossil fuels become more expensive, alternate sources of energy become more realistic, points out Larsen.

Tomatoes Attacked By Fungal Diseases

Tomatoes have had a rough time this year, and the problems are not yet over.

The foliage on tomatoes throughout Texas is being attacked by a number of fungal diseases such as early blight, septoria leafspot and leaf mold. Of these three, septoria leafspot appears to be the most common disease. Maneb or zineb fungicides usually give satisfactory control of these diseases on tomatoes.

Septoria Leafspot is one of the most destructive foliage diseases of tomatoes. It may attack tomatoes at any time, however, it generally causes problems after the fruit begins to mature.

In checking plants for this disease, look at the older foliage. The fungus is characterized by circular lesions with gray centers surrounded by dark margins. With age, the spots become covered with tiny, black specks from which the spores are produced. The lesions are smaller and more numerous than the early blight organism.

The disease overwinters on old tomato vines and wild relatives of the tomato family. The fungus is most active when the temperatures are between 60 and 80 degrees F and during periods of high humidity.

Early Blight is a fungal disease of tomatoes which causes early defoliation of the plant. It reduces the size and quality of fruit.

This fungus is characterized by irregular, brown spots. They first appear on the older foliage. With age the spots show concentric rings forming a target pattern. A yellow, diffuse zone is formed around each spot.

Although spotting is observed throughout the year, it is most common during the fruiting period. The organism is favored by high humidity and high temperatures.

Leaf Mold is a disease which previously was a problem mainly in greenhouse tomatoes. It is now a serious problem on many of the new varieties.

It first shows up as a whitish spot on the upper surface of the foliage. This enlarges and becomes yellow. An olive-green, velvety coating is formed on the undersurface of the leaf.

Plants Need Vacation Care

Before leaving on vacation, gardeners should make arrangements for their plants.

Water your plants deeply if rains have been few. If you'll be gone over 5-7 days have a neighbor hook up your hose.

Fertilize lightly, if at all, right prior to leaving. Nitrogen fertilizers are the big growth producers—go especially light.

Prune hedges, other plants likely to get rangy by the time you return. Pick all ripe and nearly ripe vegetables. If you'll be gone over a week arrange for a friend to pull and use produce.

Check carefully and spray for all insect and disease pests. Four days can ruin a plant hit with spider mites. Same thing for caterpillars. Spray or hoe weeds in the garden—they can quickly conquer in your absence.

Mow the grass the last day or two before you leave. Don't mow "extra close" or you'll likely hurt the grass, subject it to sun burning. Don't let your grass grow hog wild while you're gone—get somebody in for a clip job. He'll probably need to edge walks as well.

Put houseplants out under a shade tree or near a bright window. Soak them overnight before you leave, but don't leave them standing in water for the duration.

Take equipment by the repair shop if needed.

Hopefully they'll have it ready when you return.

Have a nice trip knowing things at home will be fine when you return and don't forget to visit some gardens while you're away.

The symptoms occur on the foliage and can cause severe defoliation. High humidity and temperatures of 65 to 80 degrees F. favor this disease.

Spacing Fights Disease

The space between rows and between plants in the row is important in the prevention of plant diseases.

Most of the foliage diseases of plants are favored by periods of poor air circulation and high humidity. Plants closely spaced will have reduced air movement over the leaf surface, thus increasing the humidity in the microclimate area of the leaf (1-2 mm on either side of the leaf).

Plant diseases are for the most part caused by small microscopic plants which require extended periods of either high humidity or free surface moisture to germinate and develop.

Plants which are properly spaced allow air movement over the leaf surface thus encouraging more rapid drying and lower humidity at the leaf surface.

Home gardeners should be reminded that as the plants grow and develop that they will require an increasing amount of space. This must be considered when planning the garden.

For Vegetables

Fall Good Season

More delicious vegetables can be grown in the fall than any other season of the year in the Metroplex according to Dr. Robert Moon, Dallas County Extension Horticulturist.

Dr. Moon pointed out the fall temperatures are made to order for such tasty treats as tomatoes, squash, green beans, onions, cabbage, broccoli, carrots and turnips.

Dr. Moon will be the featured speaker at a special program on "Fall Gardening" to be held at the Texas A&M University Research & Extension Center on July 12. To be held in the new auditorium the program will begin at 7:30 p.m. and end at 9:30 p.m.

The meeting is free and open to the public and Dr. Moon pointed out that there will be free literature from Texas Agricultural Extension Service on the many points of fall gardening.

Bugs Attack Squash

Home gardeners should start watching for squash vine borers.

This insect is one of the worse pests of squash in Texas. Squash vine borers range from Canada to Argentina. There are two species found in Texas. The pest attacks squash, pumpkins and occasionally cucumbers and melons.

The adult of the squash vine borer is a "clear-winged" moth with a wing span of one and one-half inches. It is metallic blue-black or green-black in color with orange rings around the abdomen and orange hairs on the hind legs. The moth flies around the plant during the day time and is often mistaken for a wasp.

The moth deposits small, oval, flattened eggs singly on the stems and leaf stalks, usually near the base of the plant. The eggs hatch and enter the stems where they tunnel along for about 4-6 weeks, feeding on the inner tissue. Full grown larvae are a little more than one inch long. They are white, heavy-bodied and have a brownish head.

The first symptom of damage is usually a wilting of runners or the whole plant. Masses of yellowish excrement may be found around the holes in the vines usually near the base of the plant. Heavily infested plants are usually girdled and become rotten and die.

Squash vine borers usually appear about the time that squash start to bloom. Frequent inspections for eggs and-or damage should be made at this time. Treatment for this pest should be made when moths are observed or when eggs or damage can be found on the plants.

Baha'i Holiday Noted

The Baha'i Community of Plano will observe the anniversary of the Martyrdom of the Bab on Saturday at noon in private ceremonies.

The Bab or Gate, one of the central figures of the Baha'i Faith, was a Persian youth, 25-year-old Mirza Ali Muhammad, who became a religious leader in the mid-1800s. The Bab was executed by a firing squad at noon on July 9, 1850, after having foretold the advent of a prophet.

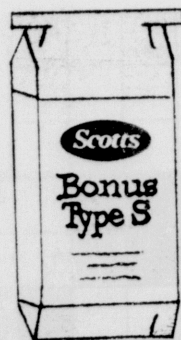

In 1863, the Baha'i Faith was founded by Baha'u'llah, who claimed to be this prophet.

Use mesh bags as totes

POLLY'S PROBLEM

DEAR POLLY — Do you know of any use for the plastic mesh bags in which oranges are sometimes sold? They are so pretty I hate to discard them.

The white plastic containers in which motor oil, bleaches, etc., are sold can be made into cute little waste baskets by using colored markers. I put a Pennsylvania Dutch design on one of mine and use it in the kitchen to hold the daily garbage. — HELENE.

DEAR HELENE — Remove the string at the top and securely fasten on embroidery hoops to make most practical shopping bags for carrying small items. Also they would be great for the children to carry books to school or the library. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — The enclosed clipping with a picture of contestants in a pie eating contest perfectly illustrates my Pet Peeve. Many people in our land are hungry and yet some seem to think this waste is a sport to say nothing of the danger of someone choking. To me this sort of thing is disgusting. — E.S.

DEAR POLLY — My husband's parents had the same problem Mrs. A. has with mold growing on their walls which is seemingly caused by the gas heater. After trying anything and everything they were told that the stovepipe was probably stopped up with soot and after cleaning it they had no more trouble. — MRS. B.

DEAR POLLY — Since our area cut back in the use of water in parks and on lawns, it is no longer possible for dogs and cats to get a drink from dripping faucets or water in gutters. I have always kept a coffee can filled and changed it when I watered the lawn but I no longer do that. However I do still keep a filled can of water and have seen five cats come to it for a drink this week. Two of them were new to me and I watched to see where they went. They waited for traffic, crossed the highway to the next block. Evidently owners are forgetting that the animals outside need food as well as water. My can was empty this morning and a cat waited for my husband to fill the can. Please folks put out a can of water as a cat can go hungry but they do need water. — D.P.

DEAR POLLY — I keep my kitchen salt in one of those small margarine tubs with a lid and find it is so much easier for measuring when I am baking or cooking. Just dip the spoon in with no mess. — SUSAN.

DEAR POLLY — A quick way to touch up white scuffs on black patent shoes is to use a permanent broad-tipped black marking pen. — MRS. B.F.

Polly will send you one of her signed thank-you newspaper coupon clippers if she uses your favorite Pointer. Peeve or Problem in her column. Write POLLY'S POINTERS in care of this newspaper.

God Is The Cornerstone

Is God the cornerstone of your church? It doesn't matter how small or how large your church is, how rich or how poor. The really important thing is the foundation of your church. If God is not the cornerstone, the structure cannot be sound.

God reveals himself through his Word—the Bible. The Bible should play a central part in your church school. Children should continue to learn the important lessons it teaches. God should also be the cornerstone of your life. If he isn't yet, then start today to build a firm foundation for your life with God as your cornerstone.

Alice's Restaurant Gets Some Class

By ARTHUR P. BUSHNELL
LENOX, Mass. (UPI) — There have been some changes since singer Arlo Guthrie told the world "you can get anything you want at Alice's Restaurant."

The restaurant is not "around the back, just half a mile from the railroad track." You cannot "walk right in." Most summer nights, it takes a reservation.

The simple, frame building has been traded in on a resort, 20-unit motel, cocktail lounge and restaurant complex atop a scenic hill opposite the main entrance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home.

"It's completely different," says Alice Brock, her brown eyes sparkling and her ruddy complexion wrinkling in a smile as she surveys her new restaurant. "The old place was in an out of the way spot and didn't even have any windows. You had no sense of being anywhere and I kind of liked that. It was all old barn wood, the silverware and chairs didn't match, the floor was uneven; it was rustic and it was very small."

"But there were so many restrictions that we couldn't do very much. We couldn't seat very many people, no alcohol could be served unless you were eating a full meal, we couldn't serve after 9 p.m., and we couldn't have any entertainment."

Alice said her continuing dispute about those restrictions with Stockbridge, Mass., officials finally forced her to move to this nearby town.

Her running battle with Stockbridge selectmen was legend in the area. She still feels "they were just trying to put me out of business."

"It was very frustrating because I had the support of the people. But it became a drag, a real strain."

"I really loved that little place. It was built by friends and there was a real family feeling in terms of people who worked there and people who built it. But we outgrew it, and I try not to look back."

A hummingbird flutters at a nearby rhododendron bush. Alice's purple peasant blouse rustles as she turns to watch it.

"There's some nostalgia about the old place. But I try not to look back. It's just like a child. You love them at seven years old and then again at 27. You think 'what a sweet child that was,' but you wouldn't want them to be a child again."

"Most people just love it. But a lot of people are very shocked and say 'what do you mean this is Alice's Restaurant,' but I just say 'hey, I've grown up a little bit.'"

Now there is linen, crystal, roses on the tables.

The customers, she said, "are a tremendous mixture — more varied than ever and I like that. There's no dress code here and I don't care if people come in shorts or suits."

"It's an elegant building so I couldn't make it rustic. It's not that I'm trying to get fancy, it's just the way things worked out."

Alice still works in the kitchen every morning and seems to be perfectly at ease bustling around the stove, picking up a large poached salmon and seasoning dishes by instinct.

"I'm at an awkward stage where I'm an executive. I don't get to get into the kitchen as much as I'd like to. When I do I sometimes get distracted by other business and find myself rushing back to keep something from burning."

Alice has a year-round staff of 35, a summer staff of 75. "Just scheduling people is a fulltime job."

Celebrated Diner Goes Fancy

But she still manages to think about taking over as bartender or cook or whatever job needs doing. She's aware of her celebrity status. "But whatever brings the customers here the first time doesn't matter because I know once they've eaten here they'll come back."

She signs a "lot of autographs — although I don't understand it because I've never asked for an autograph. But it's important for a restaurant to have an image. Some places are very good, but there's no real personality. It's good to have a person walking around saying 'how was your dinner' and 'what can I do for you.' Most evenings that's what I do."

But when "people say to me 'aren't you lucky? If it wasn't for Arlo, you'd be nothing,'" that bothers her. "And I say 'Isn't he lucky? If it wasn't for me, maybe he'd be nothing.'"

There are still some people who won't come to Alice's Restaurant at all, as she put it, "because they believe in all drinking wine, smoking dope and eating brown rice and vegetables. Eventually they get here somehow, when their relatives come in from Ohio — all tourists seem to come from Ohio, I don't know why — or when their women's club has a luncheon here."

"I always like to be around when that happens because they come in so ap-nice surprise for them to realize we're not monsters."

The restaurant's busiest season is July and August, when the symphony is in residence at Tanglewood across the street. But reservations are needed throughout the summer — especially weekends.

Of herself, Alice said, "I don't go to Florida for the winter or even stay away nights. I'm even more involved in this place than I was in the other. I don't go off grounds very often and there's no boyfriend or anything like that. My whole life is this business."

much as I hate it sometimes, I love it other times."

Among the most popular dishes: Papa Joe's Cucumber Soup. "It's one of those things everyone seems to like so I spend my summer slicing cucumbers," Alice said.

About Guthrie. He is an investor in the restaurant and still stops in "whenever he's in town. But he's one of those people who forgets how large we are now and drops in with 12 people on Saturday night without a reservation."

Alice has also written two cook books.

Would-Be Stars Need Teachers

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — You can't become a movie star anymore without a good teacher.

Regional theater and B movies once provided youngsters with the necessary classrooms. Local television drama once offered opportunities to learn.

But even when opportunities for professional experience flourished, stars of the magnitude of Clark Gable and Marlon Brando sought teachers or coaches. Gable's first wife, Josephine Dillon, was a drama coach. Brando was an early disciple of the "method."

The acting teacher is and has been a major force in the making of such current stars as Paul Newman and Robert Redford.

One of the best in Hollywood today is Harry Mastrogeorge, a bearded bespectacled man of many theatrical talents — musician, director, writer, actor.

Mastrogeorge holds classes two nights a week at the Chamber Theatre in the San Fernando Valley where some 24 actors and actresses, veterans and tyros alike, perform scenes under his clinical supervision.

A warm, energetic man with enormous compassion for his charges — especially the timid fledglings — Mastrogeorge is as much psychologist as teacher.

He taught drama at the Brandeis graduate school in Boston and at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts for more than 15 years. He also ran his own studio in New York, teaching some of today's major stars.

He has continued to teach since coming to Hollywood almost three years ago to direct films.

During the course of a five-hour session he wheedles, cajoles and questions his students. He demands more, more, more, from the performers, insisting they can do better, invest more of themselves in their roles.

"An accomplished actor must have three qualities — innocence, imagination and vulnerability," he says.

His success appears to be based on the dictum that technique and craftsmanship are secondary to the attitude and emotional approach of the actor to character and story. He is dedicated to the precept that the play's the thing.

"The best actors do the most homework," he went on. "They utilize a childlike innocence of imagination and vulnerability without conceptualizing or intellectualizing what they are doing."

"Really, imagination comes down to using a 6-year-old's capacity to make believe. The vulnerability to be moved yourself by what you've created carries it on from there."

"The best way to move an audience is to be moved yourself. Or in comedy, if the audience is to have fun, then the actor must be having fun himself."

"It's such a simple formula that most people overlook it."

Simplicity is the key to Mastrogeorge's teaching. It is a fact of life that most performers are brimming with hangups to begin with. Additional intellectual and emotional complications from teachers inhibit their talents unnecessarily. Mastrogeorge builds confidence.

He works mightily to untie the psychological knots and emotional roadblocks of his students. After they have performed a scene he talks to them articulately about their feelings rather than their actions and stagecraft.

Sometimes it is agony for the actor forced to examine his own psyche before the whole class. But the moments of revelation and understanding are triumphs for both actor and teacher alike.

He sets his actors free, unleashing the 6-year-old hiding beneath the layers of sophistication, insecurities and cynicism.

"Most acting is taught on the basis of 'You can't do it. Therefore, we'll give you therapeutic ways of acting,'" Mastrogeorge said. "I am totally opposed to that approach."

"I've been teaching 20 years and I've been an actor myself. In the 1950s it was 'the method,' which is a good approach. But if it takes precedence over the story then it's the wrong direction."

"I teach from the pragmatic point of view of the director in dealing with the actor as an instrument. I don't direct students when they are working. That would be an indulgence, an exercise for me, not for them. They must learn to work with the director and not be dependent on him."

"I teach what the actor is responsible for in regard to himself and the story. Eighty to 90 per cent is homework — taking time to come into communion with the story, understanding all its depths, heights and dimensions so it takes precedence over any realities."

"An actor is a human being with a strong sense of the situation. Imagination versus reality. A fine actor thinks as a human being."

Circus Comes to Town

Twelve performances of Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus—The Greatest Show on Earth—are scheduled at Dallas Memorial Auditorium, through July 11.

The 106th Edition of the show, already acclaimed by critics as the finest in circus history, will feature more than 300 performers collected from more than 20 different countries, and more than 200 animals, from elephants to tigers and rare trained polar bears.

Here are dates and times of the performances—the only engagement of The Greatest Show on Earth this year in the Dallas-Ft. Worth Metroplex: Thursday, July 7, 2:30 p.m. and 8:00 p.m.; Friday, July 8, 2:30 p.m. and 8:00 p.m.; Saturday, July 9, 2:30 p.m. and 8:00 p.m.

Harrah Slams Two Homers

Rangers Blast Oakland, 8-3

By MIKE RABUN
UPI Sports Writer
ARLINGTON, Tex. (UPI) — It's funny what happens when things calm down around the Texas Rangers camp for a few days.

The Rangers win two games in a row.

Texas had not done that since mid-June — or before the managerial shuffle began that eventually led to the hiring of Billy Hunter ten days ago.

And there was an obvious change in the way the Rangers played Thursday night in an 8-3 decision over the Oakland A's. They seemed to care about what was going on.

"There is a great improvement in team spirit since I've been here," said Hunter, who is conducting a shortened version of spring training for his club during the current home stand. "I think they finally realized all the moving around is over."

The Rangers have failed in the clutch time after time during recent weeks, but Thursday night Jim Sundberg delivered a two-run single in the third and with the game on the line in the sixth Toby Harrah leaned into a 3-2 pitch and produced a three-run home run.

Harrah came back in the seventh with a solo blast that ran his home run total to 13 for the season.

Harrah's generally frustrated performance of late has symbolized the Rangers' skid.

"I have to make myself understand that I can't do it all myself," said Harrah.

"All I can do is my best. When you are going bad, you start to press, and as soon as you take that pressure off yourself, you often start hitting it pretty good."

"Juan Beniquez is really smoking it right now. You can just see it. When he comes to the plate he feels he is going to get a base hit. After I hit the home run in the sixth, I just knew I was going to hit the ball hard my next time up."

In addition to producing at the plate Thursday night, the Rangers also came up with fine pitching performances from two question marks — rookie starter Len Barker and reliever Roger Moret, who spent almost three months on the disabled list after a shoulder operation.

Barker, making only his second start for Texas, pitched well through 5 2-3 innings, and Moret came on to pitch 3 1-3 innings of hitless ball to win his first decision of the year.

"This is the third time Moret has pitched for us," said Hunter, "and each time he has improved. I would say that is a hopeful sign."

Finley's Insulting Remarks Fail To Dampen Steelman

By TOM WHITFIELD
WASHINGTON (UPI) — A former Texas congressman interested in buying the Oakland A's baseball team and moving them to Washington doesn't think insulting remarks from the team's current owner, Charles O. Finley, will be a fatal blow to his chances.

"I'll just call Finley on the phone when the time comes again," said Alan W. Steelman, spokesman for the unidentified group interested in the purchase.

"There are other parts of this deal that can be worked out while relations with him sit in abeyance for a while."

According to the Washington Star's version of Finley's reaction, "a while" could be a long time.

"I'm sick and tired of the stories that keep coming out of Washington," the Star quoted Finley as saying, "sick and tired of promoters back there saying they are while back, said he wanted to come to Chicago to meet me. That was three months ago, and I only saw him that one time. He's a Texan,

'He's a Texan, that's all - big hat and no cattle.'

going to buy my ball team. "I guarantee you that I'm not going to fool around with this latest jerk. The guy's nothing but a nickel-and-dime politician."

Finley also gave his assessment of the negotiations: "This man pestered the hell out of me a that's all—big hat and no cattle."

Steelman, now in private business in Reston, Va., said the publicity was "a terribly distressing thing."

"You can't conduct negotiations of this type through the media," he said.

Norton Vs. Young

Elimination Bout Nov. 5

By MARTIN LADER
UPI Sports Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — No matter how long and loud he talks, there's one worthy opponent Muhammad Ali never will get the better of. As promoter Don King, himself known to turn a phrase over — and over — put it: "Father Time is taking his toll on him. He won't go on forever."

Muhammad Ali is still the world heavyweight champion, and as such, anyone who wants to do business with him has to do it his way.

So it is that Ken Norton, who once said he'd fight no one but Ali following two controversial losses to him, has agreed to meet former sparring partner Jimmy Young in a heavyweight elimination Nov. 5 to determine which one will meet Ali early next year.

"You might say that Muhammad has been the .natchmaker here," the loquacious King said Thursday. "He came to me and said, 'I don't think I want to fight both these guys. I don't want them to think I'm ducking them, but I'm getting too old. I think they should fight each other and the winner will fight me.' I jumped on that suggestion."

The 31-year-old Norton has been guaranteed $1.75 million and the 28-year-old Young $1.5 million to meet in a scheduled 12-round bout on Saturday night, Nov. 5, in the 5,000-seat Caesars Palace in Las Vegas. The fight will be televised live by ABC.

King said he had a commitment, but not a contract, from Ali to meet the survivor.

"I'll believe it when it happens," Norton said to this. "I'm not totally convinced."

Even though Ali would be 36 by the time of a possible rematch, Norton discounted the idea that the champion would be too old to stand up against a younger and powerful rival.

"How old was Archie Moore (former light heavyweight champion) or Ezzard Charles?" Norton asked. "So many guys win the title when they're 37 or 38. I think a lot of it is mental and a lot of it PR (public relations). I don't think Ali is in such bad condition."

Ali, meantime, is signed to fight fifth-ranked contender Earnie Shavers in Madison Square Garden Sept. 20, but that bout is tied up in litigation between the Garden and Top Rank Inc., which has Shavers under contract.

It also was speculated that if the Shavers fight falls through,

And you can make deposits and cash checks in the lobby or at the motor bank. Every department's open so you can do the banking that you never seem to find time for on the weekdays.

Speaking of weekdays, our motor bank will now open at 7:30 a.m. and stay open till 6:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Of course, it will be open on Saturday morning, too. Like all our other departments. That means you can be a weekend banker at Citizen's. And with our new hours, you may even start using your lunch hours for lunch.
